Other basic features include a rec hall, a loan library and DVD rental, convenience store, propane filling up, and a courtesy patrol around the park to take care of any issues. Northern Utah may not be as saturated with sprawling parks as southern Utah, but there's still a lot to do. You have all hiking, cycling and great views of Great Salt Lake, home to some of the best sunsets in the country. If the water is in the right place, head to the northwest corner of the lake to see Spiral Pier. You are also a few minutes outside Salt Lake City, home to some great museums, eateries and other attractions. Gary Weathers/Getty Images Panguitch may not be as highly rated as Moab, but it's still a prime destination for high desert adventures. Stay at Panguitch KOA to get right up on the action with all your favorite amenities and features. You can get a crawl, complete with full utility hookups and a digital antenna to capture local stations. Showers and bathrooms are kept tidy and tidy, and this KOA rounds off its facilities with pool, playground, group pavilions and propane filling. This KOA has a great centralized location to enjoy all the fun in Panguitch and surrounding southern Utah. You are surrounded by Bryce Canyon National Park, Cedar Breaks National Monument, Red Canyon State Park, and you are not too far from Zion National Park. If you're looking for a unique angling, Panguitch Lake is just 17 miles up the road. Try to get to this park at the end of June to catch the unique hot air balloons. rhyman007/Getty Images People think of high desert landscape when they think of Utah, but certain parts of Utah are excellent for winter activities. A Mountain Valley valet will guide you to one of 95 rv sites equipped with 30/50/100 amp hookups, along with water, sewage, free cable TV, and the internet. Personal room seekers rejoice, the bathrooms and showers at Mountain Valley RV Resort are private. You have a fitness center, RV supply shop, camp shop, fully equipped kitchen in a common area, and plenty of leisure activities such as horseshoes and volleyball. Heber City is in the Heber Valley Rocky Mountains and is full of blue ribbon hotspots such as Provo. If you bring ATV, you get a lot of use out of it on the local trails. Take a scenic ride on a Heber Valley Railroad Excursion or drift across the landscape in a hot air balloon. Mountain Valley is also over half an hour from all the excitement and slopes of Park City, Utah, which houses some of the best snowboarding courses in the country. Jeff R Clow/Getty Images Moab is ranked as one of the best tourist destinations for those who love the outdoor and Spanish Trail RV Park can be the base for moab adventure. After a long day in Moab, you will return to your creature comforts and Spanish Trail RV Park has them. They have huge pull-through sites equipped with full tool hookups along with free cable TV and Wi-Fi, all under the shade to protect you from the harsh Moab sun. The bathrooms and shower facilities got a 10/10 from the Good Sam RV Club, so you know they're spick-and-span. There is also a dog park, laundry, group pavilions, mini market and large lush grass areas where you and the children can play around. You have two popular national parks: Arches National Park and Canyonland National Parks, including the popular Dead Horse State Park. You can spend days walking and cycling the trails around these parks or going out on a backpacking adventure. You also have rafting on Colorado or capturing incredible views of La Sal Mountains. If you're looking for a little less adventure, take a scenic drive around the parks or try a few laps at Moab Gold Resort. Dania Delimont/Getty Images Zion Resort RV Park and Campground lets you right into the middle of the gorgeous Zion area with all the amenities and features you can request. Each site comes with full benefit hookups, a tree for shade, fire ring, picnic table, cable TV and internet access, and it's on your individual website. Toilets and showers are private with individual rooms with toilet, sink and shower. Other facilities and facilities at Zion include a social hall for groups, 24-hour laundry, propane refills, a takeout grill, camper kitchen, camp shop/gift shop, and a dog park. When it comes to things to do, the Zion area has them. The main jewel of the area is Zion National Park and Zion Canyon. Catch up on spectacular views, a sky full of stars and plenty of wildlife in Zion. This is a national park that should be on everyone's bucket list. Also close by are Pipe Springs National Monument, Snow Canyon State Park and Brigham Young Home. Utah, like elsewhere in the western United States, offers something for everyone. Whether you're travelling through the state or want to visit some of its picturesque destinations, you'll find the above five holiday parks and campsites some of the best in the country. Thank you for telling us! Park City, Utah has a reputation for being one of the best ski destinations in the United States, offering visitors of hills to shred and mass fresh powder on an annual basis. But the city has many other things to see and do too, no matter what time of year you come by. If you are planning a visit to the area, we have some suggestions for someone can not miss activities that will help you soak up the local culture and find a little outdoor adventure along the way as well. 01 by 12 Jason Merritt/Getty Images Let's just move on and get this out of the way immediately. No list of things to do in Park City would be complete without at least mentioning the great skis that exist there. The city of 8000 houses both Park City Mountain Resort and Deer Valley Resort, both of which have world-class options for expert skiers, but are also very accommodating for beginners as well. These two ski resorts have more than 7,800 skiable acres between them, which is enough space to make it feel like you have the mountain completely to yourself at times. If you visit the area in winter, you will definitely want to spend some time on these first class ski slopes, which are among the best in all of Utah. 02 out of 12 If driving a large Utah mountain isn't your thing, consider visiting Woodward Park for a different kind of winter trip. Tubing is the primary activity here, with seven illuminated tube tracks to fly down and an elevator to whisk riders straight back to the top of the hill. But the recently expanded offerings also include a massive indoor centre with trampolines, foam pits and other attractions, next to a coffee shop and cafeteria as well. Woodward is even home to Utah's only indoor concrete skate park as well, offering year-round riding for those who like to skate. 03 out of 12 Utah.com If you're looking for something a little more relaxing to do while you're in Park City, why not take a drive along one of the local scenic cityways? There are a number of spectacular routes throughout the area, not least which are Guardsman Pass and Provo Canyon. Along the way you will see epic landscapes, stunning views, and maybe even some wildlife too. And if you prefer to enjoy the view from the seat of a bike, most trips can also be pedalled. 04 by 12 David Becker/Getty Images Founded back in 1869, Park City has a long and rich history. But in 1898, the city suffered a massive fire eradicating a large part of the city. Finally, this area was rebuilt, and many of these buildings still stand today as part of the Main Street Historic District. Visitors to this part of the city will find dozens of shops, art galleries, restaurants and other attractions. Open year-round, historic district is a great place to take a walk, do some shopping, and enjoy a glass of wine over an excellent dinner too. You may even be surprised by some of the hidden gems you'll find here, with some charming, charming places to visit. The building took its architectural influences from an increase in interest in Egyptian history following the discovery of King Tut's tomb. The amazing elements are still on display today, giving the theatre a unique look of its own. Originally a place for vaudeville acts to entertain the locals, the Egyptian continues to play host to acting, stand-up comedians, musicians and other entertainers. The theatre underwent a major renovation back in 1998, but still has the same quirks and charms as it did when it was first built. 06 by 12 Ryan McVay/Getty Images When Salt Lake City hosted the Olympics back in 2002, many of the events were actually held in Park City. Bobsled races from these games are still fully functional in Utah Olympic Park, and visitors can take Comet as it is called for a ride. The race is more than 1,000 feet in length, providing plenty of adrenaline-inducing excitement on the way down. Those who feel the need for speed will especially enjoy this attraction, which is likely to leave you breathless to the end. 07 of 12 George Rose/Getty Images As a world-class winter destination, Park City has plenty of opportunities for visitors to play in the snow, including exploring the surrounding area on a snowmobile. Book a tour of Red Pine Adventures and you'll embark on a backcountry excursion to the company's thousand acre private playground, which also happens to be home to abundant wildlife and stunning scenery too. Red Pine also leads guided snowshoe tours in winter too, and in summer visitors can take a guides horseback ride through the surrounding countryside instead. 08 of 12 Grappa Italian Restaurant Park City may not be a particularly big city, but it has more than its fair share of delicious restaurants. For example, drop off Grappa for a wide variety of Italian options or visit Butcher's Chop House for a gourmet experience in a relaxed atmosphere. Fletcher's is known for offering traditional options with an unexpected twist, while High West Distillery is a great place to enjoy an adult drink while enjoying an outstanding meal. In the mood for something else? You have no problem finding many tasty options to feed your cravings while you are in town. Continue to 9 of 12 below. 09 of 12 Ronald C. Modra/Getty Images As already mentioned, Park City is a famously great ski destination in winter, but in the summer months the same landscapes also make for excellent mountain biking. In fact, riding is so good in the area that the city was designated the world's first Gold Level Ride Destination by the International Mountain Biking Association. This distinction is partly due to the more than 650 miles of available path found in and around the city. If your preferred method of exploring a destination is off-road and on two wheels, you'll find a lot to love in this part of Utah. For some great tips on where to start, visit 10 of 12 Natasha Japp Photography/Getty Images Utah is a great destination for anglers, and Park City offers some great opportunities to hit the water and hone your skills. Both the nearby Provo and Weber rivers are full of brown and rainbow trout, as well as several other species, making it one of the best fishing spots in the country. If you've always wanted to give fly fishing a try, sign up for a half or full day outing with Park City on the Fly, which not only takes you to some of the best local fishing holes, but also gets you equipped with all the equipment you need too. The experienced and friendly staff there will teach you the finer points of the art of fly fishing, making the excursion memorable. 11 of 12 Park City Mountain Resort If you find yourself visiting Park City in the summer and disappointed that you can't ride bobsled, you're lucky because it's smilier experience made for warm weather excursions. Located at Park City Mountain Resort, Alpine Coaster offers an exciting tour not unlike its winter counterpart. The gravity-driven roller coaster glides past lush mountain scenery, making impossible knocks and turns along the way. The trip is actually more than twice as long as the bobsled run, covering more than a mile. Not for the faint of heart, alpine coaster will take your breath away, but it is an experience that travelers will not soon forget. 12 out of 12 Outdoor options in Park City are many, and at times it can be difficult for visitors to decide exactly what to do. Why not let the experts on Exclusive Excursions take all the work out of and guide you on a memorable adventure too. In summer, the company can get up rafting hiking, cycling and other day trips, while in winter they can take you snowshoes, snowmobiles, pipes, or even into a cave with hot springs. All tours can be customized to meet your exact needs in terms of length, challenge and difficulty as well. Well.
